DIES IN VAIN EFFORT TO SAVE SWEETHEART

Young Marylander Drowns
Trying to Rescue Daughter of President of Beloit College.

BODIES NOT RECOVERED

Girl Hit on Head by Boom and Knocked Into River While Couple Were Sailing.

Pocomoke City, Md., Oct. 16.—Henry Page Dennis, a young member of one of the most prominent families in the State, gave up his life in the Pocomoke River today in a heroic but vain effort to save the life of his sweetheart, Miss Caroline Eaton, who was the daughter of President C. D. Eaton, of Beloit College, Wisconsin.

He essayed, from all indications, the almost impossible task of swimming ashore with the girl, who was helpless in the water, after she had fallen from his boat at a distance of several hundred yards from the bank. Neither body has been found.

Young Dennis was twenty-six years old and a son of the late State Senator Samuel K. Dennis. His home was in Baltimore, but he had business in Foxbury, Mass. Miss Eaton was twenty-three and strikingly beautiful. Both had been visiting Miss Mary Dennis, a relative of the young man, at Beverly, a short distance from here. They were so devoted to each other that their friends expected any day an announcement of their engagement.

Girl Could Not Swim.
They started out together in a small catboat for a few hours' sailing. The weather was only moderate and, as Dennis was an expert yachtsman, there was no fear of danger. Miss Eaton could not swim but had previously proved that she was fearless about a boat.

The actual drowning took place by any one, but it was only apparent when the catboat was about two miles from shore. A small wave was necessary for Dennis to back the boat to progress. His boat was so close to the shore that the casual observer noticed, long after, that the craft seemed to be drifting about. Later it was found that it had struck the bottom of the river and then it was seen that there was no one aboard. This was hours after the missing incident.

Was Struck by Boom.
The boom, in crossing, hit, and knocked her, so that she could not swim. She was struck by the boom of the catboat, which was about twenty feet long, and she was knocked into the water. She was seen to be struggling, but she was not able to get out. She was seen to be struggling, but she was not able to get out. She was seen to be struggling, but she was not able to get out.

FRENCH MILITARY DIRIGIBLE FLIES
INTO CENTER OF LONDON IN 6 HOURS

Makes Better Time by an Hour Than Fastest Express Trains and Boats—Two Aviators Fly in Biplanes from Paris to Brussels, 170 Miles, in About Five Hours, Each with Passengers.

The giant dirigible balloon America, with Walter Wellman and a crew of five men, which left Atlantic City for Europe Saturday morning, was last heard from by wireless yesterday somewhere east of Nantucket, more than three hundred miles from the starting point.

In addition to the voice of the America, there were two notable achievements in the world of wireless yesterday.

The French military dirigible, Clement-Bayard, flew from Paris to London, 287 miles, in six hours.

Two aviators, a Frenchman and a Dutchman, each carrying a passenger, flew in biplanes from Paris to Brussels, 170 miles, in about five hours, and the other in five hours and thirty-eight minutes. Henry Gynmolen, of Holland, made eighty miles on the return trip.

The following bulletins were received by the New York American regarding Wellman's enterprise.

By Wireless from Balloon America
Oct. 16, 9:15 a. m.—"The outlook is not so favorable, but keeping up the fight."
WELLMAN.

10:30 p. m.—Wellman airship called on wireless and asked whether the ship still O. K. Very faintly came the reply in one word: "Yes," indicating that they are now well east of Nantucket. This was probably the last direct communication with the ship from this point, but all observers are keeping sharp lookout and will report developments.

WELLMAN, Wireless Operator at Nantucket.

Wellman airship reports as well. Now heading east by nose, presumably following range of ocean liners. Weather still foggy. Marconi operator extremely brief, preferring to husband his time for emergencies or important news.

9:30 a. m.—Wellman airship in communication with wireless station at Nantucket, 9 o'clock, in dense fog. Judging from length of wireless signals, assume airship to be very close to Nantucket. Brisk westerly breeze blowing.

9 a. m.—Wireless from America says: "Have shut down motor and are heading east, making twenty-five knots an hour without engine. Saving juice for wireless; dynamo not working. Thick fog. No observation obtainable."

GOAL KICKING IS A BIG FEATURE

Illinois defeating Chicago by a single field goal.

There are many things to be said in favor of this play, and it looks as though the rules makers had done their work well, even if no other feature were developed from their efforts. It is a highly spectacular play always and one that keeps the crowd on the anxious seat while it is being attempted. In a tight place it has all the thrills of a baseball game when the bases are full, two out, and a pinch hitter at the bat. Furthermore, it has the quality of conserving the energies of both teams. No matter how unbalanced the teams may be, the evenly matched teams may be matched to the line of scrimmage. The Army, however, pretty effectively knocked into a cocked hat this theory. The trouble has been that most of the teams stuck to the time worn methods of attack through the line, and it has been noticeable that this method was a failure in a majority of cases. Evidently Yale did not realize that anything but the traditional features would be employed when the cadets had the ball within the shadow of their goal posts. They learned, though, to their sorrow, that a team with resources and daring would have no trouble in taking the ball across the goal line. It was almost ludicrous to see how easily Old Eli was fooled by that short forward pass. Of course, one swallow does not make a summer, but the Army taught some of the scouts a lesson, the effect of which may be seen in more than one of the games that are to come.

If Princeton had only resorted to something of this sort the "tiger" "rooters" need not have suffered attacks of heart disease. Twice old Nassau was within one yard of Lafayette's goal, only to be turned back, and another time had only eight yards to go when they lost the ball. On the other hand, Lafayette was three times within ten yards of a tally and once within ten. Then, too, in the Harvard-Amherst contest the latter had three downs in which to make only two yards, but failed because they either would not or did not know how to resort to some strategic move of the new game. All of this might help to convince that the defense has all the better of it, but a forward pass, a place or drop kick might have told a different tale.

Just because the Army outplayed Yale so decisively is no reason for any one to run away with the idea that the Cadets are going to sweep everything before them. Harvard has been making a very impressive showing in every game, and when the two clash in a fortnight there will be a better chance then to figure out just where the big teams stand. Yale is still very rudimentary and crude, and the coaching staff at New Haven has a lot of work before it to save Old Eli from a disastrous season. The line is weak and the back field mediocre. "Johnny" Kilpatrick and Paul are the only men who are playing a top notch game at present.

Princeton's Close Shave.
Princeton's close shave with Lafayette may be attributed to the fact that the Bostonians were primed for this contest, the biggest of the schedule. On the other hand, the Tigers were very anxious to administer a decisive defeat in return for what happened last year, so the close game may mean that Lafayette has a high class team. Princeton certainly looked terrifically capable of being welded into a good machine. There is a little lack of cohesion as yet, but there is plenty of chance to develop this.

It begins to look as though Pennsylvania was going to be beaten by Rutgers. The past year's game against Rutgers evidently worked good instead of evil, and the red and blue has been improving with great strides in every game since. It is an alert, active team, with some fine back field material, and it keeps on going ahead consistently there is trouble in store for future opponents.

Syracuse's victory over the Indians was one of the most notable features of football Saturday. Carnegie had been doing its usual big scoring against minor teams, but the up-Staters found the aborigines pretty soft picking. Syracuse showed evidences of having a good team in the making when they played Yale, and might have done a whole lot better had they not stood too much in awe of Yale's reputation on the gridiron.

Another thing that must not be overlooked in reviewing the doings Saturday is the victory of Rutgers over Swarthmore by the comfortable score of 21 to 5. When Rutgers held the Navy to a scoreless game it looked like a flash in the pan. The Swarthmore victory, though, makes Rutgers look pretty good when it is noted that Lafayette beat Swarthmore only 8 to 0.

New Yorkers must not forget that even though Columbia and Fordham are out of it, there is a team that is taking a very creditable place in the college football world. New York University has been advancing steadily, and the game it played against Williams was a big treat for local lovers of the sport. It is an odd coincidence that it was Chancellor MacCracken, of New York University, who called and presided at the first meeting for football reform some six years ago, and his college is still playing the game, while the other New York colleges have abolished it.

For the victors the best work was done by Landes, Collingswood and Ashby. For Woodberry, Stacy, quarter back, and Davis, left tackle, did the star playing.

Bowen, Driver and Jones, of the Virginia team, acted as officials.

lands in 1896, winning four straight games and the cup. This trophy was also captured by the Baltimore in 1897, who beat the Boston four games out of five.

Lapse of Six Years.

There were no world's championship games in 1898, 1899, 1900, 1901 and 1902, but in 1903 the National Commission inaugurated a new arrangement by which the Pittsburgh Nationals met the Boston Americans, the latter carrying off the title by winning five games out of eight. More than 100,000 persons paid to see those games and the receipts exceeded $50,000.

Again, in 1904, there was no series because the Giants refused to meet the Boston Americans, but in 1905 McGraw's men beat the Athletics in a blaze of glory. Five games were played, and each was a shut-out. The Giants won four of them, 3 to 0, 5 to 0, 1 to 0, and 2 to 0, with McPherson and McGinnity the star boxmen, while the Athletics, with Bender pitching, scored a 3 to 0 triumph. The total attendance was 91,723, and the total receipts $68,435. The New York players divided $20,845, and the Athletics out up $6,845, which each club received $17,035, and $6,840 went to the commission.

Cubs vs. Sox.

The rival Chicago clubs, the Cubs and the Sox, played in 1906, the latter taking four games out of six. The total paid attendance was 59,545, and the gross receipts $108,550.

In 1907 the Cubs beat the Detroit four straight games, the attendance figures being 78,065, and the gate receipts $117,285. The Cubs repeated their triumph in 1908, winning four out of five games, with $2,232 persons, paying a total of $94,975.

Seven games were played last year by the Pittsburghs and Detroit, the Pirates winning the last and deciding contest 5 to 0. This series was a record breaker. The attendance reached 145,295, the biggest crowd, 30,915, turning out at Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, on the second day. The gross receipts were $138,302. The Pittsburgh players divided $40,154, and the Detroit's $26,769. The rival club owners divided equally $102,547, while the commission's rakeoff was $18,890.

And there is a walling and gnashing of teeth in Cubville.

Odds shifted from 10 to 9 on Cubs to 7 to 5 on Athletics before the game. Disgruntled members will now declare that it was a frame-up.

And they do say that Mr. Bender got his knowledge of pitching before hay-loaders were invented.

Come to think of it, Kling didn't do so much in the showing up line. Friend Thomas was on the job a little while himself.

Just goes to show that you never can tell.

Collins managed to find a vacant place in the impregnable outfield of the Cubs. So did Baker and Murphy and the big chief likewise.

Also be it noted that Strunk, Connie's substitute for Olding, failed to connect safely. He scored in the error column, fumbling a ball which ended in Schulte's score.

It may not be generally known, but Rigger, who is officially in the big series as umpire, was last year a law student at the University of Virginia. He was known as "Pop," and rendered valuable aid in coaching the varsity baseball team.

"Kid" Fisher with something of a reputation in the Middle West as a fighter, is dead as the result of a blow received from Frank Hall in the eleventh round of what was scheduled to be a fifteen-round affair. It happened at Mono, Okla. Fisher had his neck broken. Good-by, fighting in Oklahoma.

Jack Johnson has some eulogistic things to say about the dead Stanley Ketchel. Among other things Johnson says that Ketchel was a real fighter, not a boxer. "There wasn't a bit of yellow in him," said the smoke, "and he gave me a harder fight than Burns did."

Every train coming into New Haven yesterday was filled with alumni of the blue, ready to offer assistance in the coaching department of the football team because of the defeat received at the hands of the West Pointers.
